

4th graders were exploring how solid rock breaks apart into smaller pieces through weathering. The activity is called the "Sugar Shake". They used sugar cubes as a model for rocks. They performed an experiment where they took sugar cubes and watched them break apart over time as they hit the other sugar cubes to understand the process of weathering. This process demonstrates why rocks at the tops of mountains are jagged, while those at the bottom are rounded.

